

Celebrating the history of fashion and textile industries in the Bermondsey Street area, London SE1

1. THE GLASSHOUSE GALLERY
Melior Place

Home to the work of artist and sculptor Andrew Logan, who founded the Alternative Miss World competition in 1972. Logan previously worked from nearby Butler's Wharf.

2. GUINNESS' TRUST DWELLINGS
Kirby Grove

Built in 1897 to alleviate poor housing, overcrowding and disease, the tenement flats had shared bathrooms and gas lighting. The census of 1901 lists residents' trades in the leather and millinery industries.

3. SNOWFIELDS
Kirby Grove

Snowsfields is a typical 19th century Board School. During this period schooling was often provided by charities. Across the road, Arthur's Mission, built in the 1890s, indicates the poverty of the area with the message 'Feed my Lambs'.

4. SUSIE STONE LTD
60 Bermondsey Street

Providing bespoke womens wear since June 2010.

5. TEMPO LEATHER
55 Bermondsey Street

This is the site of the original Tempo leather company. The company's sign is the only remaining presence of the company on Bermondsey Street.

6. FASHION AND TEXTILE MUSEUM
83 Bermondsey Street

The Fashion and Textile Museum hosts exhibitions and events aimed at providing inspiration, support and training for those in the industry. Founded in 2003 by iconic British designer Zandra Rhodes, the museum was designed by Mexican architect Ricardo Legorreta and is now part of Newham College London.

22 Leathermarket Street

The grand entrance arch at no.22 is a former leather factory.

19. LEATHER HIDE AND WOOL EXCHANGE
Leathermarket Street

Built 1878 by George Elkington & Sons, the Exchange was where the animal hides were traded. Located near to the 1833 Leather Market, it remained active until 1912. Decorative roundels depict the leather trades and processes involved.

18. R.W. AUTOS
2 Morocco Street

This longstanding garage has two horses heads above the front, which show the site was once a farriers. Provides a great vantage point down Morocco Street to consider what the townscape of leather warehouses once looked like.

17. MOROCCO BUILDING

Located at a key junction Morocco Street and Leathermarket Street, this building shares its name with the soft, pliable leather manufactured in the area which was particularly used for making gloves and upper ladies' shoes.

16. HEPBURN AND GALE'S TANNERY
239 Long Lane

Long Lane was the site of significant industrial activity during the height of Bermondsey's role in the leather and wool trades. The large warehouse at no.239 belonged to Hepburn and Gale's, which later merged with Samuel Barrow & Sons. More recently it housed the fur dealers, Britz Brothers.

15. KERRY TAYLOR AUCTIONS
249-253 Long Lane

Specialising in costume and textiles, Kerry Taylor began as an auctioneer at Sotheby's. Her eponymous business reflects the growing value and status of vintage fashion.

14. BERMONDSEY SQUARE ANTIQUES MARKET
Bermondsey Square

Every Friday morning, local antiques traders sell their wares in this vibrant market, including jewellery, furniture and china.

7. PUSSY WILLOW
90 Bermondsey Street

Opened by Amanda Thompson in 2005 to offer made-to-measure and bespoke womens wear for all occasions.

8. THE WOOLPACK PUB
98 Bermondsey Street

One of many local pubs that hints at the industries that once thrived in the area, many original Victorian features remain.

9. HOLLY AND LIL
103 Bermondsey Street

High fashion for dogs and cats including unique collars. A knitwear company was also located on this site in the 1970s and 80s.

10. TANNER STREET

The great majority of buildings in and around Bermondsey Street are historically connected with the leather trade. Tanner Street's name reflects the work undertaken by leather companies in the nearby area.

11. CHRISTYS' HATS
175 Bermondsey Street

Christys' Hats was once the largest hat company in the world, and based its hat works in Bermondsey until the early 1970s.
